Are you “OLD SCHOOL”? (by Bill O’Reilly)

You’re old school:

- If you know how to drive a stick.
- If you can remember when it actually seemed like fun to go to an airport.
- If you can remember when people got dressed up to fly on a plane
- If you don’t recline the airline seat all the way back.
- If you can remember when the phrases “We’re breaking up” and “I’m losing you” were about your love life, not your cell phone. (or maybe the transport officer on Star Trek)
- If you look at pictures of young women on a red carpet and your first thought is that they should go home and get dressed.
- If you don’t care if it’s paper or plastic.
- If you stand up during the national anthem.
- If you still bend over to pick up a penny.
- If you put everything away in the kitchen before you go to bed at night.
- If you don’t try to get out of jury duty.
- If you succeed at teaching your kids the difference between “want” and “need”.
- If you think your children should at least be able to eat solid food before they get their first iPad.
- If you don’t expect a trophy.
- If you don’t expect a standing ovation just for doing the right thing.

“Men in authority will always think that criticism of their policies is dangerous. They will always equate their policies with patriotism, and find criticism subversive.” Henry Steele Commager

Ole was at a big toy store and pointed out a train set to the store clerk. "I'll take dat one."
"I'm sure your son will like it, sir." Said the clerk.
Ole sighed loudly, "I suppose yew're right. Yew'd better give me two of dem."
